KCBA, a Voluntary Bar Association Attempts to have their Prior Board Member Elected as Judge.

KCBA, sells products to attorneys. They have done positive things for to assist attorneys, however, certain members of this organization has made unjustified comments about Nathan Choi's registration with the PDC and his advertisements in the Seattle Times. Why did they wait until November if they truly feel this should have been addressed in May? Incumbent in general easily win, however, they may have come to realized their former Board Member may lose because his challenger is more qualified to address the important legal issues that King County will face. Their release comes after cognation of this fact and is an undemocratic attempt to manipulate the public.

Their prior board member stated in his Candidate Statement that he "is the more experience and better qualified candidate for this position" prior to knowing anything about Nathan Choi. These fraudulent and untrue statements were made back in April 2017 before anything about Nathan Choi was published. Judges are must make statements and decisions after gathering all the facts and evidence. After thorough review both candidate's qualification as posted on their websites, many voters expressed that Nathan Choi is more qualified candidate to deal with the legal issues that King County will face. These qualifications include not only legal qualifications such as serving with the Hawaii Supreme Court Annexed Arbitrating Program for 7 years and practicing in multiple jurisdictions, it also includes an MBA, undergraduate studies in Real Estate and Accounting and numerous other experiences. Also, Nathan Choi has practiced in substantially more Jurisdictions than his competitor.

Spearman has deceived the public on his resume stating he is a member of the District of Columbia bar. Both Candidates claim they are a members of this prestigious bar association. A simple online check shows that Spearman is not, however Nathan Choi is. A printout of the search is attached.
